COME MEET THE FAMILY

NO.1: THE BEAST

This bad boy's been around the block.

He knows how to play the game.

Full-flavoured and characterful for the first few seconds, the Beast lets you know how nice he could be... before coming at you hammer and tongs.

Forged in the flames of the Carolina Reaper, this dude packs a punch.

At around 1 million scoville heat units, you can expect the Beast's bite-back to linger for at least half an hour.

Come an' 'ave a go if you think you're 'ard enough.

"Honestly, the best hot sauce I've ever tried and I've tried a lot. ... I love it, I can't stop ordering it..."

"When the heat kicks in it takes over, growing in graduation and punching through. The finish is long and tasty ...

Sublime."

NO. 2: SON OF BEAST

Like most second gen offspring, the Beast's son is a bit more progressive than his forbears. He's got some of the charming, charismatic flavour of his old man. But this dude's striking out on his own: he hits you faster and harder.

Perhaps unsurprising for a Gen Alpha, the Son of Beast is turbo-charged with extract. We'd caution you not to underestimate him; with a direct line to the (Carolina) Reaper, he offers an other-worldly physiological experience.

Aye, aye... You sweatin' or cryin'?

"Without doubt the most flavoursome super hot sauces I have ever had the pleasure of experiencing. As a lover of serious heat, Wiga Wagaa sauces not only give you a serious heat kick but have some of the most complex and truly satisfying taste sensations I've ever experienced..."

NO. 3: FURIOUS 4

Now, here's a motley crew with family ties spanning Britain, West Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean.

Scotch bonnets, habaneros, Naga chillies and Trinidadian Moruga scorpions each have a lot to say for themselves on their own.

Here, though, they come together in the loving arms of Mama Africa. Led by the scotch bonnet, this blend is harmonised with a touch of ground Uziza, dried crayfish and shrimp. Expect a rich, deep flavour with an endorphin count that only a barrel-based bonding session can deliver from this quartet.
